

Conclusion

• The battle against TB does not end with bacteriological cure. With hundreds of thousands of survivors potentially living with PTLD, Bangladesh must now expand its TB response to include post-treatment care. Recognizing and managing PTLD is crucial to improving the quality of life of survivors and ensuring a truly comprehensive approach to TB care. Without incorporating PTLD into the national TB framework is not just a clinical necessity—it's a moral imperative for a truly comprehensive TB care continuum.

